Relabeling in case of product configuration change

When changing the product configuration, the original labels on the device and on the packaging do not match any longer the device setup. In order to avoid later confusion and mistakes, the new configuration shall be made clearly visible by using the self adhesive configuration labels included in the scope of supply.

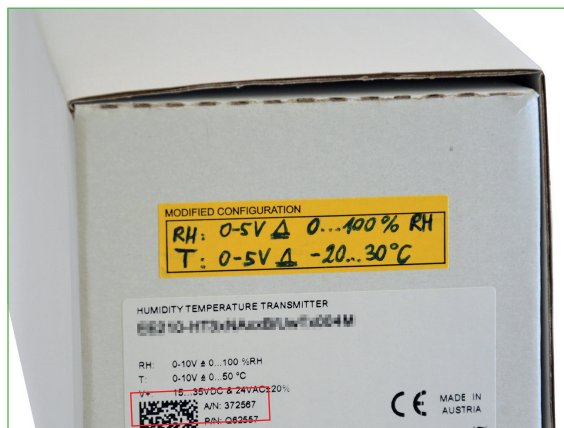

The labels are located on the interior side of the packaging.

1. Write on the label the differences from the original setup.
2. Peel off the configuration label and fix it onto side of the enclosure, preferably onto the part containing the electronics. The original label shall remain visible.

3. In case the device remains on stock after the setup change, use the second label for the packaging. The original label shall remain visible.
